EHV-1 BIOSECURITY PLAN

–Endurance Ride 29 APRILE-1 MAY 2022-AREZZO-Italy

-President ASD GENERALI ENDURANCE

Valentina Generali

-Responsible Biosecurity Plan

Chiara Vivarelli

-VSM Veterinario di Servizio FEI

Bendini Michele

This Biosecurity plan is drawn up in accordance with the FEI Post EHV-1 Return to Competition Regulation set out on 9 April and extended from 1 January 2022 in order to allow the return to competitions and at the same time protect horses and equestrian sports from the consequences of infectious diseases transmitted before during and after FEI events. Assessment of the biological risk related to the sudden emergency linked to the spread of EHV-1

Given that Italy is one of the countries indicated by the FEI among those that need measures that allow the return to competitions in total safety in relation to the dangerous situations that have arisen in 2021 with the spread of the EHV-1 HERPES virus, this document was drawn up in order to define a set of preventive and protective measures aimed at minimizing the risk of contagion for the event to be held in Arezzo on 29 Aprile to 1 May 2022 .

That said, the ASD has taken steps to take all the necessary measures to ensure the contrast and containment of the spread of the new virus, regulating it with this plan to make the event a "safe place" for the participating horses.

In this regard, all the necessary precautions are provided that must be adopted to counter the spread and contagion of the EHV-1 virus.

The contents of this document must be brought to the attention and acknowledged by anyone authorized to enter the event indicated above.

2. Introduction

2.1. Generic aspects,

The EHV virus occurs in 4 different types that affect 4 different systems of the horse, in this case the most lethal and contagious is that of type 1, in jargon EHV-1.

2.2 Symptoms of EHV-1

The most common form is type 1 which affects the respiratory system of the horse. In the most common form, it presents respiratory diseases with variable symptoms that include fever, nasal discharge, swollen lymph nodes, cough, loss of appetite and significant physiological drops, which are quite common symptoms and can be misleading and alarming those who observe the horse. In more serious cases, the Herpes Virus can also have repercussions from a neurological point of view, leading to paralysis and death.

2.2. Method of transmission

The EHV-1 virus, also known as Rhinopneumonia, has a very high viral load and is very easily transmitted by air, by direct contact between horses and also through surfaces that have come into contact with the viral components. For this reason, both sporting events and daily life in individual stables can be dangerous if the necessary precautions are not taken. It is possible, however, that horses spread the Equine Herpes Virus even without showing clinical signs (the so-called asymptomatic carriers), transmitting it only in certain environmental conditions such as stress, transport and competitions.

2.3 Diagnosis

Observing symptoms, especially at the respiratory level, cannot always lead to a correct diagnosis of rhinopneumonia, so in these cases it is categorically recommended to contact a veterinarian who can evaluate all the hypotheses. Using a classic swab or serological tests, it is possible to establish whether a respiratory infection is associated with EHV-1, by taking two blood samples 10 days apart on which the antibody titration is carried out.

2.4 Treatment and convalescence

The recommended treatment starts, first of all, with the isolation and quarantine of the person infected with the herpes virus. Unfortunately, being a virus, there is no specific and targeted cure. Treatment of equine herpes virus respiratory infections usually consists of supportive therapy, as human anti-herpes drugs are not effective in horses. Antipyretics and antitussives are administered, but also antibiotics to prevent or fight secondary bacterial infections, and to shorten the recovery period. However, with the help of a veterinary expert, a cure can be identified to treat the symptoms resulting from EHV-1 such as general weakness, loss of appetite and apathy. It is possible to preserve his respiratory health in a preventive manner through alternative methods recommended by us such as purified hay. However, in summary, the only remedies are prevention and the vaccine.

2.5 Prevention

- In order to reduce the incidence of EHV-1 infection and to minimize its spread, it is necessary to sanitize the living environments of horses combined with particularly thorough hygiene through disinfectants.*
- The isolation of the horse and tools is mandatory in case of contact with the virus.*
- The prevention of contagion depends on the probability that horses have of coming into contact with the virus emitted by a sick person or a healthy carrier (a healthy carrier is defined as the person who, even if contaminated, does not show symptoms or because it is too early to manifest them or because will never manifest being able to eliminate the virus autonomously).*

5. Definition of liability

• In compliance with the provisions of the FEI, the Ministry of Health, the General Directorate of Animal Health and the FISE, the President identifies a method of control and management of the risk inherent in the event and informs the participants about the procedures for managing the risk inherent in the contagion and transmission of the EHV-1 virus

The participants in the competition, their assistants, the Staff, the Officials correctly informed by the President have the responsibility of respecting the behaviors defined by the regulations in force and by the rules laid down by the ASD with this document.

6. Risk HEV-1

Risk control is divided into three phases

RISK ASSESSMENT

Identification of the specificity of the structure and of the plants exercised in it, for which conditions can be created that link the actual or potential presence of the EHV-1 virus to the possibility of contracting the infection. This evaluation is carried out individually on each horse that will participate in the event

All the procedures aimed at permanently removing or constantly containing the criticalities identified in the risk assessment phase.

RISK COMMUNICATION

All actions aimed at informing, training and raising awareness of the subjects concerned by the potential risk

GIVEN THE RISK OF VIRUS TRANSMISSION WITH CONTACT BETWEEN HORSES AND TAKING INTO ACCOUNT THAT EACH HORSE SHOULD BE MARKED WITH A PERSONAL MARKER, IT IS FORBIDDEN TO MARK THE HORSES

IV. THE FEI CODE OF CONDUCT FOR THE WELFARE OF THE HORSE

The Fédération Equestre Internationale (FEI) expects all those involved in international equestrian sport to adhere to the FEI's Code of Conduct and to acknowledge and accept that at all times the welfare of the horse must be paramount and must never be subordinated to competitive or commercial influences.

1. At all stages during the preparation and training of competition horses, welfare must take precedence over all other demands. This includes good horse management, training methods, farriery and tack, and transportation.
2. Horses and competitors must be fit, competent and in good health before they are allowed to compete. This encompasses medication use, surgical procedures that threaten welfare or safety, pregnancy in mares and the misuse of aids.
3. Events must not prejudice horse welfare. This involves paying careful attention to the competition areas, ground surfaces, weather conditions, stabling, site safety and fitness of the horse for onward travel after the event.
4. Every effort must be made to ensure that horses receive proper attention after they have competed and that they are treated humanely when their competition careers are over. This covers proper veterinary care, competition injuries, euthanasia and retirement.
5. The FEI urges all involved with the sport to attain the highest levels of education in their areas of expertise.
